Titan Technologies Corporation (Commission File No. 001-37764)

On June 6, 2016, Rovi Corporation and TiVo Inc. posted the following blog on their respective websites:

As we move toward bringing Rovi and TiVo together, we continue to evaluate multiple paths to put the award-winning TiVo consumer experience in the hands of users around the world. Recent reports indicated a possible intent to exit portions of the consumer business following the completion of the acquisition. There has not been any decision to exit the consumer hardware business. One of the options to accelerate our consumer business growth includes continued collaboration with third-party hardware partners, just as Rovi has done for decades and TiVo has done more recently with MSOs. Our exploration of options to bring the TiVo experience to consumers in new and different ways should not be construed as a lack of passion or commitment to this important aspect of our business.

The TiVo brand, award-winning user interface and design-centered development approach are all a direct result of a relentless focus on the consumer experience. This consumer-experience focus will continue post-acquisition and remains one of the core reasons for Rovi's acquisition of TiVo.

With a dynamic media and entertainment market undergoing rapid transformation, the proliferation of content and technology options have created fragmentation that makes the user experience more important than ever. As we combine the companies, we expect to draw upon our strengths to accelerate the adoption of our integrated solutions, bringing the next generation of entertainment discovery to consumers worldwide.
